Two insulin secretagogues which stimulate insulin release from pancreatic islets were purified from bovine pancreas and partially characterized. The smaller insulin secretagogue designated B-I was obtained by anion exchange chromatography. This molecule is most similar to B-II in having a molecular weight of about 30000, a subunit Mr of about 10,000 (as judged by electrophoresis in sodium dodecyl sulfate-polyacrylamide gels), and the ability to stimulate insulin release from pancreatic islets. Although B-I is as effective as B-II in stimulation of insulin release at the concentrations of 100-600 nmol/l, its activity is much more rapidly reversible by heat treatment or dithiothreitol and the islets can be stimulated again when they have been returned to control medium. At least part of the insulin secretagogue activity of bovine islets is attributable to B-I. The larger insulin secretagogue designated B-II is obtained by gel filtration of bovine pancreatic extract. This molecule has a molecular weight of more than 400 000 and a subunit Mr of about 11,000 (as judged by electrophoresis in sodium dodecyl sulfate-polyacrylamide gels) which renders it much more resistant to inactivation by heat and dithiothreitol than B-I. B-II is a dissociable
